INTRO

This is one annual event that people try not to miss when the literally millions of sardines start out on their northward migration.

The adventure starts when the sardine shoals are spotted with their attending "fleet" of predators in the form of dolphins, sharks and pelagic birds.

INTINERARY

Scuba Diving the Sardine Run

The sardine run is one of the top drives on the planet for experienced scuba divers. Being in the thick of things when the sardines form a bait ball is a total thrill on this adventure. Getting close to the bait ball is very difficult for divers as the fish get spooked. Even if divers cant get into the middle of the boiling and swirling fish, the dolphins, sharks and kamikaze dive bombing fish gets the adrenaline pumping.

Snorkelling the Sardine Run

Everyone isn't a diver and for all non-divers the show is just as great as most of the action can be seen right from the boat. They can indulge in snorkeling with the whales and dolphins and for those with nerves of steel, there are the sharks.

Photo & Video

It has become part of the sardine run adventure for photographers and videographers to come from many places to capture some of the best action on film. The fame and popularity of the annual sardine run on the east coast of South Africa brings National Geographic, Discovery Channel and other TV stations and magazine photography crews each year.
