

WHALE WATCHING MOSSEL BAY

ADRENALINE LEVEL 2

Whale watching has become something of a tradition among South African locals that live in towns and cities in and around the coastal areas where whales are found. However, for those not fortunate enough to be able to be part of the annual festivities each year, participating in whale watching boat trips even once is an extraordinary experience.

INTRO

Whale watching has become something of a tradition among South African locals that live in towns and cities in and around the coastal areas where whales are found. However, for those not fortunate enough to be able to be part of the annual festivities each year, participating in whale watching boat trips even once is an extraordinary experience.

Whale watching is at its best from June to October when the whales travel south to South African coasts to get away from the icy Arctic winters further north. During these months, whale sightings are 99% guaranteed when taking one of our whale watching boat trips from Mossel Bay. We also offer Seal Island trips all year round for those who are in South Africa out of whale season. Our sea faring adventures depart every hour on the hour from Mossel Bay and our vessel is permitted to carry up to 50 people.

Please Note:

Trips are subject to sea and weather conditions and booking is essential
