INTRO

Great White Sharks gained a bad reputation with the creation of Stephen Spielberg's movie Jaws and to this day that fearsome reputation haunts this shy creature of the deep. Take the plunge with us on a White shark cage diving trip to dispel these myths and stand in awe of the ocean's top predator.

The truth is that Great White's are no more man-eaters than your pet dog at home, but that does not make them any less dangerous than they really are. MORE

Shark cage diving in the open ocean waters offers divers the chance to see a variety of different shark species and other marine wildlife.

Whether you are an experienced diver or have only dabbled with a snorkel, all levels of experience or inexperience are welcome as scuba gear is not used on these dives. These shark cage dives take place in a host of offshore hotspots selected on each day to offer you the best chance to see sharks. Bait attracts the sharks up close to the cage and the sharks then often approach to within an arms length or closer.

Shark cage diving Gansbaai primary target species are the magnificent shortfin mako (closest relative and very similar in appearance to a great white), blue sharks and copper sharks, locally known as bronze whalers.

These White shark cage diving trips are therefore NOT purely a shark dive but rather an opportunity for you to see a variety of different marine animals in CONJUNCTION to seeing or diving with the sharks.

For the guest who wants to have an all round marine wildlife experience and at the same time still enjoy the thrill of seeing sharks up close then this is a trip we really recommend
